

Ayşe Elif KAYA

RETHINKING THE RIGHT OF WITHDRAWAL
UNDER THE GDPR IN THE CONTEXT OF BIOBANK RESEARCH:

Is the right to withdraw consent under the GDPR sufficient enough for balancing data subjects' wishes and the interests of the biobank research?

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements.....	V
Table of Contents	VII
Introduction	1
Motive	5
Research Question	6

CHAPTER 1

Biobank Research Under the GDPR

1.1. Lawful Grounds for Processing Personal Data Under the GDPR	7
1.2. Scientific Research Regime Under the GDPR.....	10
Legal Basis	11
Individual Rights	11
Adequate Safeguards	12
1.3. Consent Under the GDPR	12
1.4. Consent in Biobanking	14
1.5. Forms of Consent.....	19
Broad Consent	20
Dynamic Consent	22
Tiered/Meta- Consent	23
Conclusion	24

CHAPTER 2
Impacts of The Right to Withdraw Consent in Biobanking

2.1. Right of Withdrawal in Biobanking..... 28

2.2. Right of Withdrawal Under the GDPR.....32

2.3. Impacts of the Right to Withdraw Consent..... 34

 2.3.1. Conflict of Interests..... 34

 2.3.2. Negative Impact on Research Results and on Future
 Research..... 36

 2.3.3. Diminish the scientific recognition of the biobank..... 36

 2.3.4. Hurdle for European Research37

 2.3.5. Impact on the Other Areas of Law.....39

CHAPTER 3
Way Forward

3.1. Improving the Consent Model.....43

3.2. Establishing an oversight body47

3.3. Adopting De-Identification Techniques within Biobank 49

3.4. European Union-wide Legislation for Biobank Research51

Conclusion..... 56

Conclusion.....59

Bibliography..... 63